

What if I am picking up food shares for other people?

Beginning in July 2022, food distributions will no longer require reservations. Instead, at most distributions where logistically possible, individuals will be asked to complete paperwork onsite at the first distribution they attend after June 30th, 2022. Individuals who have completed this paperwork will receive a passcard* at the next distribution they attend. You must present this passcard each time you are picking up food.

Individuals who pick up food shares for other households will be asked to complete paperwork that verifies the relationship and identifies them as a proxy. This paperwork will be given to the proxy at the first distribution they attend. It will need to be filled out by the head of the household of the families they are picking up for, and returned at the next distribution the proxy attends. (Paperwork can be returned to any distribution location).

When the paperwork is returned, the proxy will receive a passcard* for each household they proxy for. You must present these passcards each time you are picking up food. Proxies will be able to pick up shares of food for as many families as they want, as long as they provide the appropriate paperwork.

1 passcard = 1 share of food

The Foodbank staff reserves the right to increase or lower shares as necessary.

*a passcard is a small plastic card with a barcode that serves as an identification card and can be scanned by foodbank staff and volunteers
